

Methods for treating cells

Abstract

- 5 Methods for treating cells, e.g. proliferating cells such as tumour cells, comprise exposing them to cell-damaging agents (which can cause indirect damage, e.g. as vectors for delivery of a gene encoding a cytokine or antigen) and to antigen-presenting cells so as to damage them or reduce their proliferation.